

A world map showing the distribution of words for tea across different regions. The map is overlaid with a grid of latitude and longitude lines. The legend indicates three groups: 'te' (blue diamond), 'cha' (red diamond), and 'other' (grey diamond). The 'te' group is concentrated in East Asia, Southeast Asia, and parts of South America. The 'cha' group is widespread across Europe, North America, and parts of Africa and Asia. The 'other' group is scattered across various regions, including Africa, Asia, and Australia.
